Facility Cleaning

Interwaste offers its' clients a wide range of standard industrial and commercial cleaning services that complements its' general waste removal and management functions.

These services can take the form of scheduled end-of-year routine maintenance or as unique emergency call-outs as the result of an accident or incident. Interwaste is often tasked to clean and remediate sites once initial waste removal contracts have been completed.

The company also operates a division managing the contract cleaning of facilities, from offices and administrative buildings to large industrial manufacturing areas. A full scope of services is available from basic cleaning to specialised deep cleaning functions.

Those clients utilising Interwaste as a one-stop-supplier find that its' daily office and facility cleaning services are a convenient and efficient way to account for these necessary functions.

This is fully in keeping with the companies' aim of holistic waste management, with our involvement starting at the point of generation allowing for the separation of waste materials at source.

Ultra High Pressure Cleaning

The Interwaste Ultra High Pressure (UHP) cleaning system utilises high pressure water with no abrasives for the removal of material deposits from various surfaces. Typical applications could include the removal of tar from holding tanks, rubber from concrete surfaces such as runways and driveways and crude oil from tanks at pressures up to 900 bar.

Structural Dedusting

Structural Dedusting is a specialised service often involving risks not normally encountered in industrial cleaning. In certain circumstances the actual removal of dust from industrial structures can become explosive due to a static electricity build-up generated by the dedusting.

Interwaste employs specialised equipment and technical expertise in order to safely offer this service which can be utilised for the cleaning of factories, power stations, and various production equipment.
